Natural History of Patients with BRCA-mutated High Grade Epithelial Ovarian Cancer (HGEOC) Before the Era of PARP Inhibitors Maintenance in 1st Line Treatment Feb 23 2022 Background : Maintenance therapy with olaparib considerably improved progression-free survival (PFS) among women with newly-diagnosed, advanced BRCA-mutated high grade epithelial ovarian carcinoma (HGEOC)(1). Based on the large real-life ESME ovarian cancer cohort, we aimed to describe the patient's characteristics and survival outcomes of a selected cohort of BRCA-mutated patients the era of PARP inhibitors maintenance in first line.Methods : ESME ovarian cancer is a national cohort including patients with ovarian carcinoma managed in the 18 French Comprehensive Cancer Centres (NCT03275298). ESME Research program collected retrospective data from patient's medical records. BRCA1, BRCA2, or both mutated p with de novo diagnosed advanced (FIGO stage III or IV) HGEOC were eligible. All data for surgical and medical management were reviewed by medical oncologist or gynecologist oncologist in each centers. PFS was defined as time from beginning of first line until earliest documented disease progression or death. Results : Of the 4777 patients with advanced ovarian cancer treated in 1st line by platinum-based chemotherapy between 2011 and 2016, 266 patients were BRCA mutated. Median age was 57.0 years (33-81). 187 patients (70.3%) harbored a BRCA1 mutation, and 75 (28.2%) a BRCA2 mutation. Majority of patients (66.9%) had FIGO stage III disease. Almost all patients (95.5%) underwent surgical debulking, after neoadjuvant chemotherapy (50%), or upfront debulking surgery (50%). 147 patients (55.3%) received maintenance therapy, majority with bevacizumab alone (78.9%). Some patients, included in clinical trials, received PARPi inhibitor alone or in combination with bevacizumab. After a median follow-up of 51.7 months, the median PFS was 20.1 months [95 CI: 18.2-21.9]. A better mPFS was observed for patients with FIGO stage III than stage IV (32.4 months and 25.4 months, respectively), or BRCA2 mutation than BRCA1 (33.3 months and 27.7 months, respectively). Estimated 5-year overall survival (OS) for the whole population was 69.2% [95 CI: 65.3-73.0]. Conclusion : This large ESME cohort described clinical features and real-life survival outcomes among patients with newly diagnosed advanced BRCA-mutated HGEOC treated in comprehensive cancer centres. Looking to the poor prognosis of these patients, before PARPi era, already 55% of patients received maintenance therapy with bevacizumab.

Falls in Epileptic and Non Epileptic Seizures During Childhood Jul 07 2021 At the Mariani Foundation meeting held in Milan, October 1995, highly qualified specialists were invited to assist in understanding of the basic principles of development and brain function, with specific attention to those structures and mechanisms involved in the phenomenon of falls. Epilptologists illustrate the different semiologic modalities and clinical conditions in which the fall is an epileptic symptom. A main part of the book is dedicated to the medical and surgical treatment of syndromes where falls are in the foreground. This volume has the mission of improving life conditions of children who suffer from drop seizures by limiting the risks to which they are subjected, and to try and compensate for the psychological and social limitations affecting them.
